FLYING HIGH

"I want to own my own business," Nick Harvey says. It sounds like something a typical Lebanon Valley College sophomore business student would say.

Harvey, however, is anything but typical because he already owns his own business. A niche business that breeds butterflies to be released at weddings and other special events. A business he started when he was just 16. A business that last year grossed more than $50,000.

Harvey, now 30, operates Sunny Day Butterflies Inc. from May to October. At any given time, he raises 1,500 to 2,000 butterflies in spare rooms at his parents' home in Paxinos, PA, near Shamokin.

"They didn't think it would get this big," Harvey said of his parents. "I kind of thought it could, but nobody believed me. I thought it was an incredible idea."

It was Harvey's mother — an elementary school teacher in Shamokin — who introduced him to the concept of raising butterflies to sell for special events. She mentioned that Rick Mikula, who pioneered the unusual occupation, did a presentation at her school.

"It hit me right away," Harvey recalled. "That day I went up and I e-mailed him."

Harvey visited Mikula at his Hazleton farm to learn about the business, then set out to start his own. One of the first tasks was to get a stock of orange-and-black Monarch butterflies.

"I went out in fields and I caught them," Harvey said, noting that his business is low on overhead expenses.

The female butterflies lay their eggs on milkweed plants, and caterpillars hatch and feed on the milkweed for about 20 days. Then they hang from a branch, each one forming a chrysalis. The butterflies emerge after about 10 days, and Harvey keeps them in cages.

To send his living product to customers, Harvey puts each butterfly in a triangular envelope, folding its wings the way the insect does when it sleeps so it will remain dormant during the trip. He packages the envelopes together and ships them overnight to arrive the day before the event.

At the wedding, each guest receives one of the triangular envelopes. As the bride and groom emerge after the ceremony, the guests open their envelopes, releasing the butterflies which fly away in a colorful swarm.

"A lot of people think it's a lot more exciting than throwing rice or birdseed," Harvey said.

He charges $96 for each dozen butterflies, plus a shipping charge of $25. Harvey said an average order is for about four or five dozen, and his largest was for 18 dozen.

In addition to weddings, he said, people have ordered the service for birthdays, anniversaries, funerals, grand openings, and even a prisoner being released from jail.

When he started the business, Harvey had only a few orders from people who lived near his home. He then posted an Internet web site (www.mgfx.com/sunnyday) which has been his principal form of advertising.

Now, he said, he supplies butterflies for an average of six or seven events each week during the season. His big shipping day is Thursday, so batches of butterflies arrive for weekend events.

"I can't keep up," Harvey said. "I turn people away all the time. I have brides crying on the phone."

He receives help in the business from his parents, Doug and Pat Harvey, and his girlfriend, LVC sophomore Nicole Duzick.

One of the early challenges with Sunny Day, Harvey said, was timing things so enough butterflies emerged from the chrysalis stage so he could ship them to events on time. If the temperature in his home dropped, he said, it slowed the insects' 30-day egg-to-butterfly life cycle. Some days, he took the chrysalises to a car outside and cranked up the heat.

Harvey sends butterflies anywhere in the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. He said raising Monarchs here and releasing them farther west could disrupt their migration patterns.

The young entrepreneur said he spends about three to five hours each day feeding the butterflies and tending to the company. His father, who owns a home medical supply firm, helped teach him about business issues, such as billing and advertising.

"I absolutely had no idea. I was 16," said Harvey, who graduated from Lourdes Regional Catholic High School. Before starting Sunny Day Butterflies, his work experience included selling golf clubs on the Internet and loading clay pigeons on catapult machines at Elysburg Gun Club.

Harvey is already expanding his business by selling gifts such as butterfly-raising kits through his web site. In addition, he said he is one of only a few people nationwide licensed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to build a butterfly house, an enclosed natural habitat. He said he has received calls inquiring about help with such projects from as far away as Charleston, S.C.

The LVC sophomore said he isn't sure if his fledgling business will develop into a permanent career.

"I'll probably always do this on the side," Harvey said, adding that he likes being in a business that adds joy to people's lives.

On the Sunny Day Butterflies web site, Harvey recounts a Native American legend. According to the tale, if you tell your wish to a butterfly and release it, the insect will carry it to the Great Spirit, and it will be granted.

Perhaps there is some truth to that legend. For Harvey, at least, his wish to operate his own business has been fulfilled.

VOICE COACH TO THE STARS

Professor Phil Morgan counts among his successful students young singers who have appeared everywhere from the stage of Hersheypark to the Metropolitan Opera.

When The New York Times recently carried a rave review of baritone Jon Hayes' performance in the lead role in the Rossini opera, "The Thieving Magpie," one of the first people he called was Lebanon Valley music professor Phil Morgan.

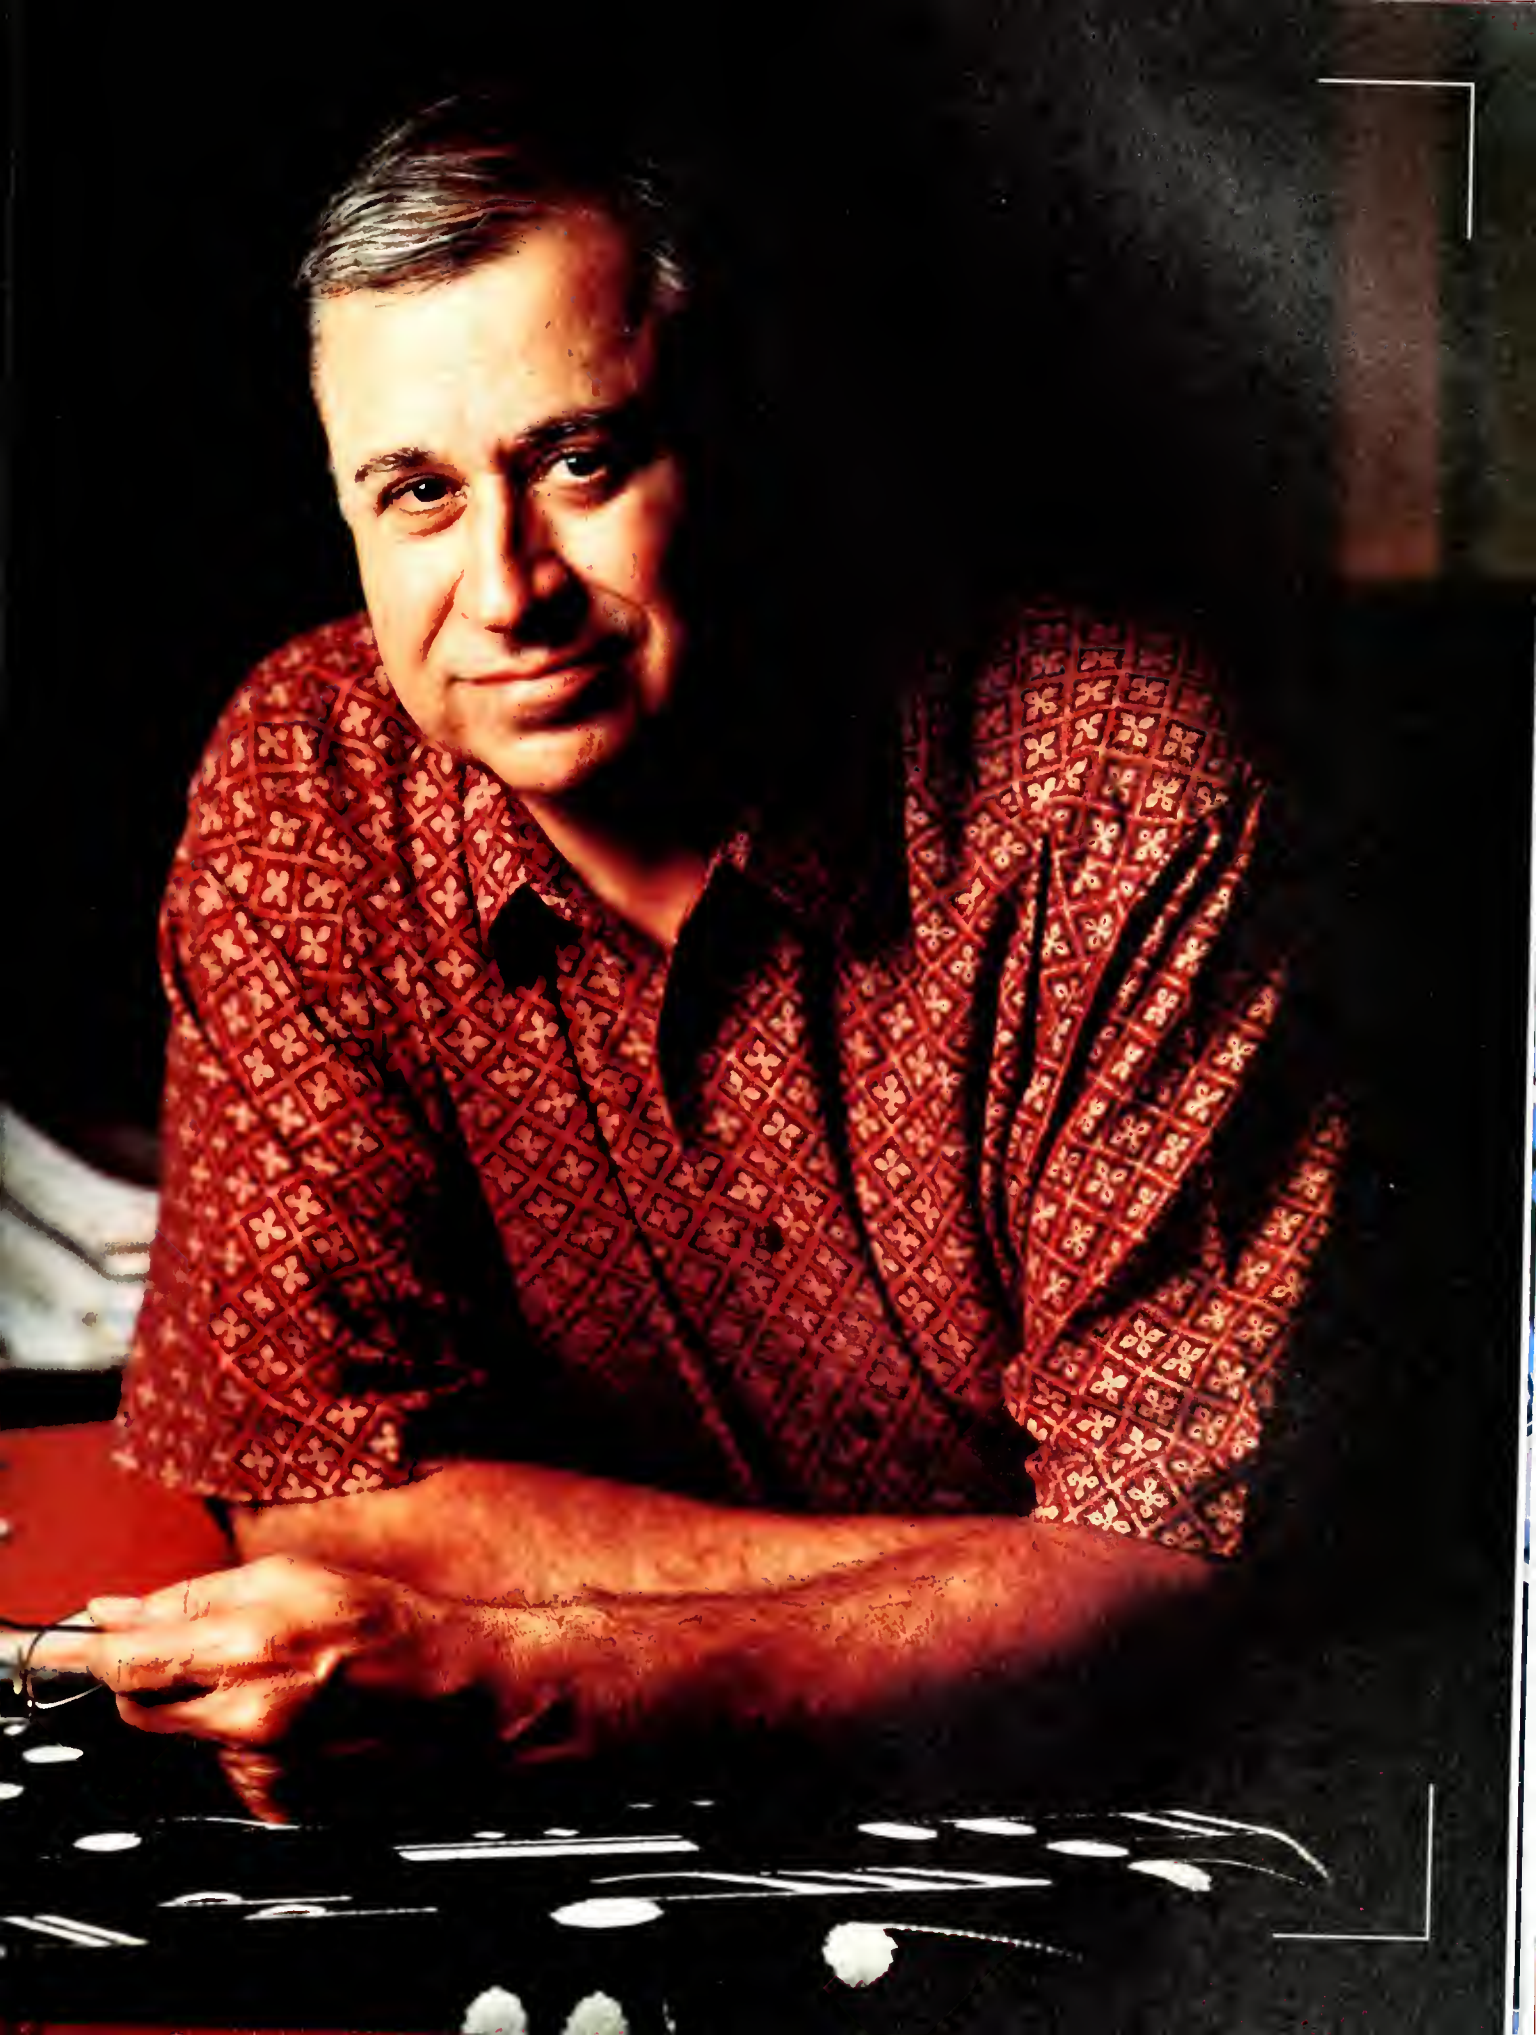

"I was as thrilled as Jon was," Morgan says. "I coached him for four years while he was in high school, and I love to hear how he's doing. A few days after the phone call, I got an email from him saying that he will perform in Handel's 'Julius Caesar' with the Washington, D.C. Opera in February."

Morgan's pride and excitement are obvious when he adds, "Placido Domingo will be Jon's boss, and this young man is only 27 years old!"

He's just as animated when he talks about what his former students are doing on local stages, such as the Timbers Dinner Theatre in Mount Gretna and Hersheypark's various musical shows. It's obvious he likes to keep up with the young singers he once put through lip trills and scales — both at Lebanon Valley College and in his roles as private voice instructor and vocal coach/musical consultant at Hersheypark.

Morgan, who turned 60 in October, knows how difficult it is today for those starting out to break into the big time. And he definitely cares for the well-being of his singers — that's how he ended up working at Hersheypark in 1987.

wings to take their place.

"The most gifted singers are born that way," he said, but many can improve their technique with practice and instruction in the correct way to sing.

And his help, for many, has paid off. One younger Hersheypark performer who Morgan coached is Jay Liggett, who once rode around the park in a funky Volkswagen Beetle as part of a comedy troupe.

Liggett is now featured in the familiar back-to-school Staples commercial, singing "It's the Most Wonderful Time of the Year," and is also a pool player on a "10-10-321" commercial.

Morgan appreciates just how difficult it can be for young singers to hit the big time. "It's amazing. It takes a long time for these people to get somewhere," he said. "You have to be so tenacious to stay in the business, or you run out of steam."

Other singers who have been taught or coached by Morgan include:

- Lothair Eaton, a former Hersheypark performer, who appeared in "Starlight Express" in London and the PBS production of "Showboat."
- Dedra Eastland, another park alumna, who is appearing in the "Showboat" road show.
- Howard Scott, a 1975 LVC alum, who performs with the Washington, D.C. Opera.
- Jean Kelly, who had a lead role in the movie "Mr. Holland's Opus," and has appeared in MCI commercials saying, "Eat your heart out, AT & T."
- Stephanie Bates, a 1975 alum who is female singer in the central Pennsylvania group "Fall Guys and a Gal."
- Kristie Knauer who had a lead role in the Mount Gretna Timbers Dinner Theatre, sang the national anthem on the "Rosie O'Donnell Show" and has performed for Disney.
- Ken Horst, an LVC senior music education major, who had a lead role in the Timbers Dinner Theatre.

Morgan admits he can't keep track of them all, but has heard from former students who have appeared in Broadway

He and his wife, Susan, often took their daughter, Mireille and son, Anthony to Hersheypark to watch the summer shows. Being the voice doctor that he is, Morgan detected some of the singers laboring a bit in their performances. Park officials took him up on his offer to help, and he began coaching in rather spartan quarters near the Hershey Bears' shower room.

Since then, he has spent part of his summer helping young performers through whatever vocal crisis they may encounter during their show-packed summer months, from colds to nodules.

"We bring him in as an extra measure to help our performers out since they are singing five shows a day," says Cherie Lingle, Hersheypark assistant entertainment manager.

One of the most damaging conditions he watches for is the development of vocal nodules, a singer's worst fear, Morgan says, which cause a raspy sound in the voice.

Morgan refers singers with this problem to a doctor for professional help, and also gives them tips on how to prevent the condition from worsening. It can include steam and vocal exercises to no talking between shows.

As much as Morgan cares about his singers, he knows that these young performers may not always encounter such helpful advice in their careers.

"You have to learn to take care of yourself," Morgan said. "My job is to educate them so they are not used by people," he said, knowing that there are always others waiting in the musicals such as "Cats," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Cabaret," among others.

Not surprisingly, Morgan came from a musical family. Each Sunday after the dishes were done, the family would sing together. "People would knock on the door and ask if they could come in and listen," he said. "There was no TV then, so this is how we had fun."

His singing talent was apparent early. He first sang professionally on the stage at age six, and by junior high school he knew music was going to be his calling.

An important musical motivational force — besides his parents — was a singer named Robert Weede, who Morgan heard sing at the Starlight Theater when he was a senior in high school. Weede also sang with the Metropolitan Opera and in musical theater. "I thought, 'If I can learn to sing like that, I want to do it the rest of my life,'" Morgan recalls.

He majored in music education and performance at nearby Pittsburg State University, and landed his first professional paying job in 1959 at age 18 with the Tulsa, Oklahoma Opera, performing with several of the leading opera singers of the century.

The following year Morgan, a baritone, sang 12 performances of "Lucia di Lammermoor" with Beverly Sills in the Central City Opera near Denver, Colo., one of the oldest opera houses in the country. The cast was a virtual "who's who" of performers from the New York City Opera and the Metropolitan Opera, he says, including John McCurdy, who is still singing at the Met.

"I learned so much from this experience. They put on a musical production the same as in the Met," he says. Morgan also sang a season with the Starlight Theater in Kansas City with seasoned performers like Gordon MacRae, John Raitt, Janis Paige and Jerry Lewis, and performed with the Kansas City Lyric Theater.

After completing graduate school at Pittsburg State, Morgan was determined to fulfill one of his musical dreams — to study in Europe with some of the old masters, knowing that they wouldn't be around forever.

The opportunity came in 1964 when he landed a job with the Overseas Dependents School to teach music to the children of members of the U.S. Armed Forces in Europe. He recalls landing at Orly Airport, knowing no French, and learning he was assigned to a Paris high school, which was the perfect location in which to look up a famed voice teacher he dreamed of studying with — Pierre Bernac.

He studied a summer at the Mozarteum in Salzburg,

Austria, and sang with the International Music Festival.

After heading back to Paris in the fall, he succeeded in tracking down teacher Bernac, who agreed to take on Morgan as a student.

Morgan also taught at Rheinmeim Air Force Base in Frankfurt, Germany, which led him to the other teacher he wanted to study with — 70-year-old Otto Braun, an expert in German art song, who was acquainted with people like Einstein and Albert Schweitzer.

Morgan located Braun in 1967 living in a six-story apartment building that lacked an elevator. "He bounded down the stairs, and we started lessons that day," Morgan says.

Braun would never accept any money for his lessons. Instead, Morgan paid him with something he would accept — a pound of coffee or a liter of brandy, which Morgan, who held the rank of major, could buy at the PX.

As it turned out, Braun had a special mission of his own for Morgan to fulfill — performing Goethe text put to Schubert songs for an exclusive celebration of the anniversary of Goethe's birth in the famous German writer's Frankfurt home.

Morgan decided to give up singing professionally in 1973 due to the demands it placed on his family life. "Enough was enough," he said. "I had been singing professionally since 1959."

He's kept busy, however, performing in many local musical programs, churches and theater productions.

Morgan practices what he preaches, and hasn't given up on his own personal quest for perfection. He still takes voice lessons from Dr. Thom Houser, of New Holland, who has students who fly in from all over the world, according to Morgan.

While it has always been a difficult career field, Morgan believes the music business has become an even more challenging way to make a living. "The business is becoming almost impossible to break into," he said. And this is even with what he believes is a smaller pool of talented people trying to enter it, since many are discouraged from even giving it a try. "Young people are more realistic today," he states.

He, however, was lucky enough to have had the best of both worlds — personal success along with helping others to achieve the same.

"The most gifted singers are born that way," he said, but many can improve their technique with practice and instruction in the correct way to sing.

REWARDING achievement

The college's unique merit-based scholarship program has generated applause from parents and students, and changed the demographics of the campus.

Bill Brown remembers the days when applying for scholarships was both a headache and a mystery to college students and their parents.

"They didn't want to go through all the hassle and uncertainty and the delay before they knew what kind of package they would receive," said Brown, Lebanon Valley College's dean of admission and financial aid.

Eight years ago, LVC decided to change all that.

"Now the first question we ask is, 'how well have you done in school?'" Brown explained. "Based on their answer, we know exactly what kind of scholarship aid they qualify for."

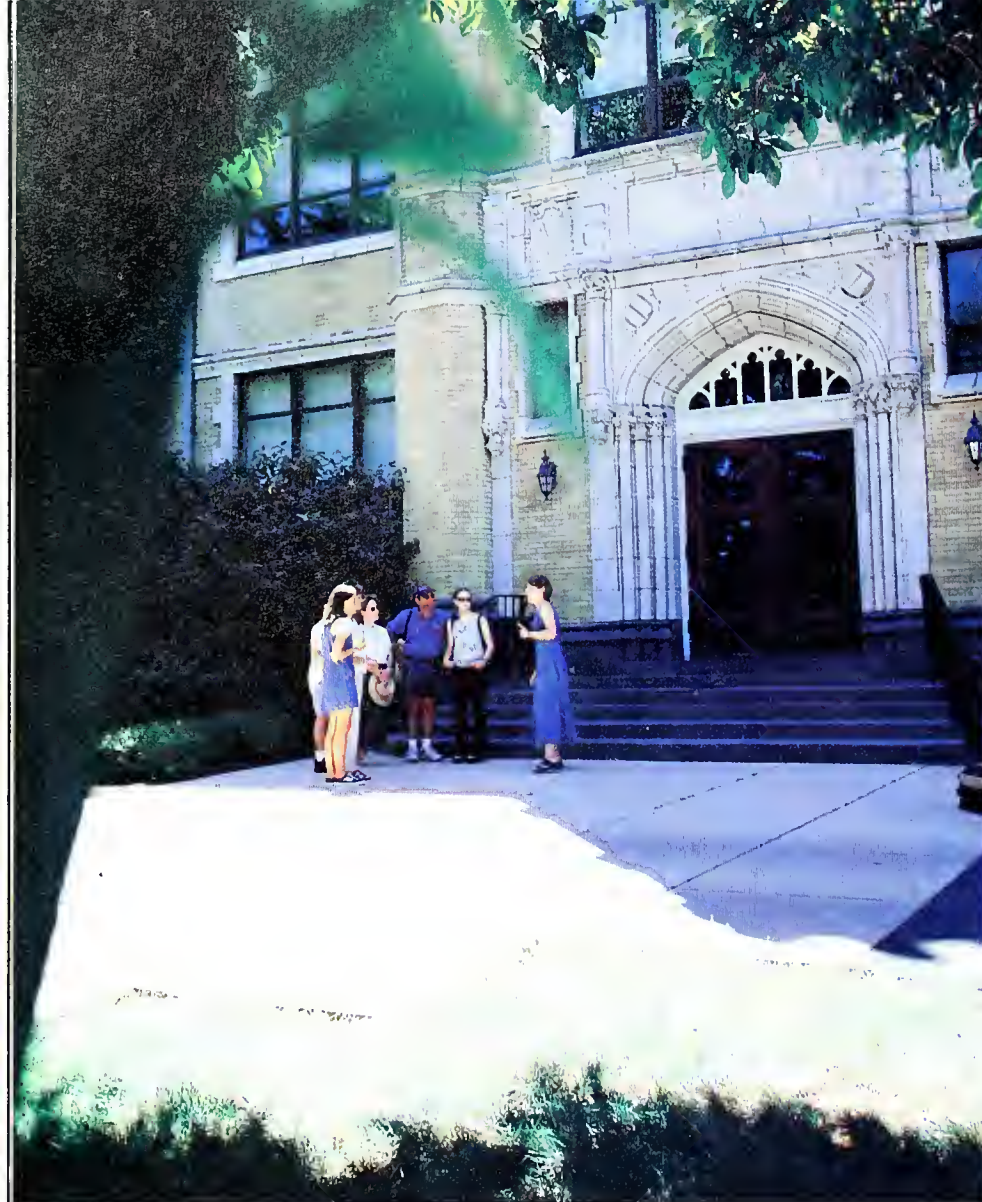

If a prospective student says she ranked in the top 10 percent of her high school class, Brown tells her she's entitled to a scholarship that will pay half her tuition for four years. "Wow, suddenly Lebanon Valley is affordable, and the price of a Lebanon Valley education is competitive with that of a state-supported school," Brown observed.

The half-tuition award, called a Vickroy Scholarship, is one of three insured by LVC, beginning in the fall of 1992. Students ranked in the second 10 percent of their high school classes qualify for a Leadership Award, which pays for one-third of their tuition. Those who rank in at least the top 30 percent get an Achievement Award, which pays one-quarter tuition.

"It's really a jewel in LVC's crown," says scholarship recipient John Coonan, a senior double major in biology and German. "I dealt with a lot of comparable schools when I was looking for a college that didn't even come close in terms of financial rewards."

This year, Lebanon Valley will spend about $9 million on these and other scholarship programs for its students, Brown said.

Since the achievement-based program began, more than 1,970 students have received one of the three scholarships. The awards have changed lives and shaped the Valley campus, boosting the number of applications and attracting more high-caliber students.

"The really great part about the scholarship program is the simplicity of it," said Karin Right-Nolan, LVC's director of financial aid. "Our program is unique in that there are no restrictions placed on it. Other schools may require forms to fill out, or will consider SAT scores and other factors. Our scholarship program is very simple and straightforward, and people know immediately what they qualify for."

Since the scholarships are for a percentage of tuition — which is $16,730 this year — the value of the award doesn't decline even as college costs rise.

"Students know all along the way what they can anticipate receiving," she points out. "It's a reassuring process as far as being able to plan for the student's future."

Dalinda Knauth, who graduated last May with degrees in both music and music education, had learned about LVC from her school band director, Thomas Keehn, a 1963 Valley grad. She ranked 15th in a class of more than 400 at her high school in Kingston, N.Y., and that easily qualified her for a Vickroy Scholarship.

"It made a world of difference in Lebanon Valley will spend $9 million on scholarships for its students.

what I was doing and where I was going," said Knauth, adding that because she comes from a large family she faced the task of paying for college on her own. Without the Vickroy award and additional scholarships, she said, she probably would have attended a community college close to her home.

"As far as financial aid is concerned, I had an incredible package that allowed me to go to college," Knauth said. "It was actually better for me to go away to school than it was for me to stay in my area."

Knauth pointed out that the achievement-based scholarships attract serious students. And to keep the awards for four years, they must meet academic standards throughout their college studies.

"In addition to rewarding high school achievement, it also helps promote the continued excellence," said Knauth, who plays violin and viola.

She has landed a one-year assignment as district string teacher for the Conestoga Valley School District in Lancaster, Pa. "I got a job right out of school, which was just that much more satisfying," Knauth said.

Her younger sister, Dorcinda, is now a sophomore music and history major at LVC and also received a Vickroy Scholarship.

Biochemistry major Brian Patson, who is set to graduate this spring, had narrowed his list of potential colleges to two: Lebanon Valley and the University of Delaware. Both offered strong science programs.

"It was the financial aid package that really brought me here," said Patson, adding that it was difficult to know early in the application process how much aid he would have received at other schools.

However, he was second in his high school class in Sullivan County, Pa., so it was clear he would receive a Vickroy Scholarship at LVC. "It's almost like a guarantee, in a way," he said.

Connor agreed that the straightforward way Lebanon Valley awards the scholarships was a plus. The Annville-area resident said he had applied to four colleges, and only one other school offered aid similar to the half-tuition scholarship he would receive at LVC.

However, Connor said, the other college's offer was very conditional. "I didn't really feel comfortable about it. LVC's Vickroy Scholarship combined with the ability for me to commute made it basically my number one choice," he said.

This guarantee of achievement-based scholarships has attracted top-performing students from many high schools and has changed the makeup of Lebanon Valley's campus. In the fall of 1991, the year before the scholarship program began, LVC admitted 96 students who ranked in the top 30 percent of their high school classes. Those students made up 51.6 percent of the freshman class. This year, the fall class included about 308 students from the top 30 percent, or 75.1 percent of incoming freshmen.

Patson said he has found his fellow students "are all up there in their intellectual ability, very competent."

Brown said the scholarship program also has increased interest in attending LVC. For this academic year, Brown said, his office received almost 2,400 applications, compared to about 1,100 in 1991. The school could accommodate about 440 students in its freshman class.

"Right now I have a waiting list of students who would dearly like to come, but I don't have a bed for them," Brown said in late summer.

Despite the increased numbers, "it's still the same Lebanon Valley," said Brown, himself a 1979 graduate. "It's still a place where there's a warm, close-knit family atmosphere." He said the college plans to maintain its student-faculty ratio of 16-to-1.

Although he had considered the giant University of Delaware, Patson said, "Now looking back on it, I'm really glad I came to the smaller school. I seem to have met more people, and not just in my class, but in all years."

Connor said the scholarship program is flexible enough to accommodate students with unique academic tracks.

NUMBER OF SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENTS, 1992-1999

ACHIEVEMENT: 329

LEADERSHIP: 731

VICKROY: 919

TOTAL: 1,979

In the fall of 1997, when Connor studied for a year in Germany, his half-tuition award continued.

"They allow you to carry that scholarship with you," Connor said. He said the semester abroad also was a turning point in his academic career. He had enrolled at Lebanon Valley as a biology major, with plans to go on to medical school. After living in Germany, however, he decided to pursue the language as a second major, which meant he would spend two extra semesters at LVC, one to finish up a few courses and another to student teach.

His Vickroy award was set to end after four years, but Connor said there is a financial aid review committee that accepts applications to extend it into a ninth semester — a step he planned to take this year.

When Connor completes his studies this spring, he will be certified to teach both biology and German. He is also considering pursuing a master of health science degree, which would allow him to become a physician's assistant.

LVC's scholarship program also accommodated changes in his academic performance, Connor acknowledged. He said his grades suffered as he considered changing majors and due to outside commitments; while in school he worked as an emergency medical technician in an ambulance crew and served as a volunteer fire fighter.

Noting that students need to maintain certain grade point averages to renew the scholarships, Connor said, "Through my college experience, at times I teetered on the line."

When his GPA dropped below the level needed to preserve the Vickroy award, he received a letter telling him the scholarship was in jeopardy. "You'd go into the next semester knowing that if you fell short again, your scholarship would be reduced," he said.

In fact, Connor said, when he failed to maintain the necessary level again, his funding dropped, but he still received some benefits if he maintained the GPA necessary for a Leadership or Achievement award. When his grades improved to the Vickroy level, his scholarship went back to the full amount.

"The monitoring system that the school has in place for the scholarships is helpful and reassuring," he said.

Right-Nolan noted that tutoring is available for students who need it. "It isn't one of those programs where you didn't make your scholarship requirement, so it's gone," she said. "It encourages students to do well."

While the scholarship program was designed to reward students for their academic performance in high school, Brown said it has been fine-tuned to accommodate applicants from schools that don't release ranks.

Students who don't have the required ranking but who have combined SAT scores of 1100 or more can have a scholarship interview at LVC to be considered for the program. In addition, Brown said, students who receive a Leadership or Achievement award can go through the interview process to try to jump to a higher scholarship level.

Brown said that while the program represents a significant financial commitment for LVC, "There has been generous support from alums in supporting and helping underwrite some of these scholarships."

Connor explained that the scholarship allowed him to fulfill a pledge he had made to himself. After seeing the sacrifices his parents made to put his two older brothers through college, he wanted to do as much as possible to reduce the financial burden of his education.

"It's amazing what Lebanon Valley College was able to do for me," he said. "I give a standing ovation to the school for maintaining the program. It's money very well invested."

Successful grads offer career advice, as well as jobs, to current students through the college's Career Connections program

By Stephen Trapnell '90

Photography by John T. Consoli

With his graduation from Lebanon Valley College in sight at the end of 1997, Brian Kruzel had at least two criteria in mind as he searched for a job: a New York City location and international connections.

Dave Evans, director of career services at LVC, put Kruzel in touch with George King, a 1968 graduate who is chief financial officer for Manhattan-based Energy Intelligence Group.

King, in turn, referred Kruzel to the associate publisher at Energy Intelligence, which produces newsletters about the petroleum and energy industry. After an interview in November, Kruzel landed a job as marketing assistant at the firm in February 1998.

Kruzel said he never met King in person before Energy Intelligence hired him, but that initial contact between LVC alumni made a difference.

"I think this is a really good foot in the door," said Kruzel, who was an international business major. "I see the volume of resumé that come in the door every day, and most of them we just put aside. If you have a contact in the company, your resumé goes to the right person."

Kruzel has since been promoted to marketing coordinator, and he handles licensing of electronic publications for Energy Intelligence, which also has offices in Washington, D.C. and overseas.

Kruzel's experience is one example of LVC's Career Connections program, an effort to link students and alumni to aid in job searches. A central element of the program is a database of almost 1,000 alumni who have agreed to lend a hand to students and graduates.

"When we first started this thing, it was a box of cards," Evans said with a chuckle.

Today, however, Career Connections is a computerized list available to students in their dorm rooms and alumni through LVC's web site. Graduates and friends of the college are listed under more than 200 job categories, from acarology (the study of mites and ticks, in case you wondered) to zoology.

Other careers represented include diving, engineering, funeral services, insurance, lobbying, museum/American studies, psychobiology, restaurant management, speech pathology, and toxicology.

People researching a profession can look at a list of alumni active in that field, with information on how to contact them and how they're willing to help. For example, alumni can discuss their own jobs, arrange for students to visit them in the workplace, set up internships, make suggestions about where to look for work, and even offer jobs.

The program benefits alumni searching for employees as well as recent graduates.

"I like to go to the Valley because I know the general character of the students there," said King. He said some people who hire employees just check to be sure they have the proper credentials. "I look always beyond that. When the person comes into the workplace, things are going to change in two weeks anyway."

For that reason, King said, LVC's liberal arts background is a plus. He can also contact the college for recommendations. "I know the professors," King said. "They'd better not give me a story."

This summer, King's company hired Jarka Slesingerova '99, who majored in international business. A native of the Czech Republic, she contacted several alumni listed in the international business category of the database and also met with King in his office in February.

"It was very informal," she said. "We talked about school, and he still remembers some professors." She asked for feedback on her resumé, and King gave her a few pointers. During her final semester, they kept in touch through e-mail.

hen in July, Energy Intelligence hired her as an internal auditor in its Washington office. Slesingerova also works on special projects for King and in human resources.

Another 1999 graduate, Amy Vituszynski, found the career office helpful as she searched for a job teaching music. As part of her senior seminar, she said, she filled out a card specifying the types of jobs she was looking for and the geographic area where she wanted to work. During the summer, she received mailings each week from the career office with job leads tailored to her requests.

Vituszynski says such personal service isn't offered by some other schools. She mentioned a friend who was looking for work after graduating from a state university and said, "She's floundering because she doesn't even know where to begin."

Vituszynski also e-mailed Darla Dixon '87, who works as a publicist at the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City. Dixon, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees in flute performance, responded by describing the variety of careers related to fine arts, such as public relations, administration, and management. Vituszynski said Dixon introduced her to another way to use her degrees in music and music education besides teaching.

"It's still interacting with the people and giving young people wonderful opportunities," said Vituszynski, of Leesport, PA. "It was just another possibility. I had never really much thought about it."

Dixon has discussed job

Students can find alumni working in a field they're interested in via the Career Connections database.

opportunities with other students, and she stressed the importance of internships.

"So often when musicians graduate from college they possess a vast body of knowledge regarding their performance area of choice, but lack the practical non-musical skills necessary to compete in today's tight job market," Dixon said. "I enjoy helping to bridge the gap between performance expertise and practical application."

Another graduate who has fielded questions about jobs is Maria Montesano Boyer '86, who was an English/business management major. As a student, Boyer herself turned to Pamela Shadel Fischer '81, who helped her put together a portfolio of sample work to show prospective employers.

Since then, Boyer, a Hershey resident, has tried to help others by offering advice on where to look for jobs and visiting campus to give students pointers on their portfolios.

"I don't do the work for them. They have to do that themselves," Boyer said, adding that she provides "any guidance I can give them based on what I've been through myself looking for jobs."

Boyer has worked for Penn State University's continuing education program in Hershey and as consulting editor for a trade magazine published by the Pennsylvania Medical Society. She is now a freelance writer and editor.

"I love Lebanon Valley. It was just the right match. It was such a good and positive experience," Boyer said. "I just don't want to cut the connection. The little bit I do keeps the connection going."

Cleona School District, regularly visits the education department senior seminar to field questions from aspiring teachers. He also conducts mock interviews with education majors, offering them a chance to refine the answers they'll give when they look for teaching jobs.

"The opportunity to interview with people associated out in the field brings in a person who is unbiased, a person who is going to level the playing field," he said. "They're going to be honest and forthright with you."

Svirsko said his visits to the college also provide him with information. "I make a file of everybody I interview, so that if the occasion would occur that I need somebody in November or May, I have a tickler file," he said. "And it could be a college student I interviewed as a sub or a mock interview."

Seniors hunting for jobs aren't the only people to use LVC's Career Connections database. Dr. John Kearney, professor of English, encourages his freshman composition students to use it for two assignments: a profile on someone working in the job they would like to pursue, and a study of their major. He said about a third of his students use the career services office to assist with the research.

"It just gets the student in contact with Dave's office and gets them thinking about the next stage, which most of us want to put off until the very end," Kearney said. "Most students are very diffident and scared to talk to these full-fledged professionals who are sort of like their parents," he added. "The alumni are very forthcoming and it helps to ease that transition."

Evans said alumni can also use the database to link up with others in their fields. Graduates can call his office for the password needed to access the database through the college web site.

Any alumni who are willing to talk to fellow Valley grads about careers can be added to the database if they call the alumni office and fill out an information sheet.

Evans said he would be happy if even more students tapped the database and contacted alumni to help them get established in their careers. He said, "My dream is for people to call me up and say, 'Dave, I'm overburdened. I'm being called by too many people here.'"

CHANCE LED TO AN INTERNATIONAL CAREER

BY HEATHER ROBINO

Life's a funny thing sometimes. No matter how carefully you plan for the future, sometimes the best opportunities arise from chance encounters, near misses and blind faith.

Eve Lindemuth Bodeux '87 can attest to this fact firsthand. A proud LVC graduate with a degree in French and political science, she might never have studied languages if Dr. Jim Scott, a German professor, hadn't helped her to register for her classes as a freshman. And if she had not taken the advice of a friend, she might never have enrolled in Dr. John Norton's political science class — a class that made such an impression on her that she pursued political science as a second major. Finally, if she had taken a job in government or academics after earning her master's degree in foreign affairs from the University of Virginia — as she always thought she would — she would never have studied a second time in France, an experience that profoundly changed her life.

Bodeux's journey began in Anchorage, Alaska — she is one of the few people who can say they were actually born there. Many people who settle there, like her father, the late Paul W. Lindemuth '61, are active or retired military personnel who were transplanted to Alaska from the "Lower 48." In Anchorage, Bodeux experienced a childhood vastly different from that of her LVC classmates — no professional sports teams, no "real-time" television, no annual trips to the beach — which made her feel a bit like she was from another country when she arrived in central Pennsylvania.

But Bodeux says that any initial awkwardness she may have felt around her peers dissipated quickly, due in part to Lebanon Valley's close-knit atmosphere.

"Because LVC is a nice-sized school and the classes are smaller, it helped boost my self-esteem and made me feel more comfortable expressing my opinions in class. In fact, we were always encouraged to do that," she notes. "And the people I've stayed closest to as friends are those people I know from college."

After finishing grad school in Virginia in 1989, Bodeux felt a tug to return to France, where she had studied for a year as an undergraduate. There she pursued a second master's degree in European civilizations at the Universite de Nancy and became immersed in European culture.

"Living in France changed my life," says Bodeux. "It made me more self-sufficient, because I was put into this foreign culture and I had to sink or swim. There is constant learning in another culture. I feel like I won a prize because I survived on my own."

In reality, Bodeux won two prizes as a result of her journey to France. She met her husband, Reynald, at the Universite and married him in Bar-le-Duc in April, 1998. But she also left with a much deeper appreciation for multicultural relations, something she has now made her profession.

Currently, Bodeux is manager of Worldwide Translator Relations for Language Management International, a global language firm based in Englewood, Colorado. The company's mission is to internationalize products for Fortune 500 clients, so that they may reach global markets. Bodeux's job is to qualify the translators who convert software and written materials into numerous foreign languages from sites in Denver, Brazil, Argentina, Singapore and Amsterdam.

Bodeux's journey since leaving Lebanon Valley has taken her across the country, across the ocean, and — thanks to modern technology — around the world.

ALUMNI PROFILE

COMMITTED TO SOCIAL CHANGE

BY HEATHER ROBINO

If you wanted to summarize all that Jack Uhrich '65 has accomplished in his life, you could say he has been an agent of positive change. As a teacher, social worker, counselor and political activist, he's devoted his energies to challenging the conventional and making the world a better place.

Uhrich's social conscience blossomed while he was at Lebanon Valley College. He soon fell under the spell of his history and political science professors, particularly Dr. Jim Leamon, Dr. Elizabeth Geffen, and the late Dr. Alex Fehr.

"Jim Leamon really cemented my interest in being a history major. He made history come alive," says Uhrich. "Liz Geffen was also an inspiring teacher, and Alex Fehr was a liberal's liberal. He encouraged you to think as broadly as possible, and it was through him that I learned there was something to the left of Time Magazine."

Uhrich found the college to be a haven for free thinking during an era of tremendous social and political change, and despite his heavy work schedule, was inspired to form the first Young Democrats Club on campus and to campaign avidly for Lyndon Johnson for president.

"I went from being a Goldwater Republican to being a Kennedy/Johnson Democrat," he remembers.

After graduating from Lebanon Valley with a degree in history, Uhrich embarked on what he says was one of his most meaningful ventures. As a member of the National Student Association, he traveled to nearly 50 different colleges to help establish tutoring programs for underprivileged children. In 1968, he visited his alma mater and teamed up with psychology professor Dr. Jean Love to initiate a tutoring program for children in Lebanon County.

Uhrich went on to earn graduate degrees in teaching from Antioch-Putney Graduate School of Education in Ohio and in social work from Hunter College in New York City. After graduating from Hunter, he taught high school social studies and founded a community education program in Brooklyn.

"I think the achievements I am most proud of have to do with touching people through teaching," he says. "Besides being a parent, teaching is THE job."

Uhrich's drive for positive change has also manifested itself in the political arena. He has been active in the Democratic Party for 30 years, and has run for several political offices. But for the better part of his political career, he has been on a quest to enact change within the two-party system. In the early 1980s, that search drew Uhrich to Jesse Jackson, who he believed could lead a new movement. He signed on as co-chair of Jackson's 1984 and 1988 presidential campaigns in Congressional District 10 in Brooklyn, and later assumed a leadership role in the National Rainbow Coalition — a grassroots, multicultural organization committed to bring about change through social action groups and electoral politics.

In 1990, Uhrich and his wife, Arlene Tesler, moved with their three children to Placitas, New Mexico, where he became a social worker with the Albuquerque Public School System. He also continues his private practice of psychotherapy and individual counseling, which he has pursued for the past 20 years.

In 1995, Uhrich was co-founder of the Green Party in Sandoval County, a party whose platform addresses issues that he feels both major parties have abandoned, such as individual rights and the plight of small business owners and farmers. After a failed bid for Congress on the Green Party ticket in 1996, he ran for County Commissioner as that party's candidate in 1998. He lost the election, but managed to garner 17 percent of the vote, an impressive feat for a third-party candidate.

LVC had a Special Place in Her Heart

THE QUOTE BENEATH OLIVETTE HAAS HUSTED's name in her senior yearbook is simple but revealing, "What sweet delight a quiet life affords."

Throughout her "quiet" life, Husted maintained a fondness for LVC and, after her death in April of 1998, left a bequest of nearly $400,000 to her alma mater. The funds will be distributed in accordance with her will in support of scholarships and academic programs.

Husted earned a bachelor's degree in the social sciences from LVC in 1928 and continued her education by earning a master's degree at the New York School of Social Work at Columbia University. She dedicated her life to serving others and spent more than 26 years as an executive with the American Red Cross in Stratford, Connecticut.

CLOWNING AROUND

BY LOIS FEGAN

During Homecoming Weekend in late May 1999, the Rev. Lloyd E. Beamesderfer '39 was a popular figure rolling around the campus in his motorized wheelchair performing his duties as a committee member.

Little did anyone expect that five days later he would be "onstage" as a clown in a special performance of Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey Circus in Hersheypark Arena.

It began when his daughter, Pasha, entered her dad's name in a raffle at the Suburban Cable office in Hershey. She hoped the coupon would win them tickets to the Big Top. When the phone call came announcing the minister had won the tickets and with them the chance to star as a clown in a special pre-evening performance called "Clown Around Sweepstakes" did he hesitate?

Not for a minute.

"Talk about the traditional kid at the circus," the chaplain said with a chuckle as he described the experience. "After all, the art of clowning is a form of ministry. I took it as another way of witnessing for the Lord."

The fact that the Methodist pastor is 83 years old, a stroke victim and confined to a custom-equipped scooter made the stunt even more appealing.

"The circus people took me backstage, sat me down at a mirror alongside the professionals who were busy making up. Before I realized it I had apple-red cheeks, a big red ball for a nose and a curly bright blue wig.

"A bunch of real clowns came in to welcome me," he continued. "They were very friendly and certainly an example of everything I'd ever read about the hospitality of circus folks. Among those who helped make me feel right at home were the ringmaster, animal trainers, trapeze artists and a lot of other performers and backstage helpers.

"They made sure my big identity button was securely attached and I kept busy blessing them all."

Onstage — otherwise the tanbark — suddenly the clergyman realized he was actually driving his scooter through the curtain and parents and kids were pouring in from the special audience at the pre-evening performance.

"It seemed like dozens of outstretched little hands reaching toward me. Some had big autograph books for me to sign. I told them to trust in the Lord and to be good boys and girls."

AMERICA CHANGED HER LIFE

BY NANCY FITZGERALD

Tatjana Cuic '96 arrived in Pennsylvania from Yugoslavia in 1991, an uncertain high school student encouraged by her mother to experience a year of life in America.

"I remember coming to Middletown when I was 17," she recalls, "ready and open for whatever I would find." What she found wasn't exactly what she expected — a whole new world, a totally different teaching approach, and, eventually, a college that would form the nucleus of her new community.

"I would have gone straight to college back home," Cuic recalls, "but I got involved in a research project with Dr. Alan Wolfe at LVC. He'd put a project together with teachers, college and high school students, and two little kids from elementary school. He called me in to be part of it, and it turned out to be a really good experience. That's what turned me on to LVC — at the time I had a gut feeling that this is what I should do, and today I know it was the best choice I could have made."

It was while she was in Annville that the troubles were beginning in Slovenia and Croatia. And although Cuic's region — Cojovina, near Hungary — has remained peaceful, it began to attract a steady stream of Croatian refugees. In the summer of 1995, Cuic went back to visit her family, but spent a month working with the local church instead, trying to place refugees in new homes and rounding up any donations she could find. "That was the summer that the conflict became real to me."

And when she came back to Annville that fall, the experience stayed fresh in her mind. On her own, undaunted by the enormity of the task, she jumped in head first to do what she could to help. But she wasn't on her own for long. "The Lebanon Valley community helped me collect money for the hospital in my hometown," she says. "We sold pizzas, we did all kinds of fundraising — everybody pitched in." Together they rounded up more than $2000, and then went on to send the hospital an even more remarkable gift — a fetal heart monitor donated by Hershey Medical Center. "I'd spoken with an obstetrician in my hometown," she recalls, "who told me that without this machine they'd lost babies — the one they had was broken and couldn't be repaired. Hershey, it turned out, had one that they didn't need anymore, and we put it to great use in my hometown."

For Cuic, the experience was a lesson in the power of communities to reach out and change the world. "There are so many possibilities," she insists. "Lives can be saved and history can be changed if only people channel their energy and will and humanity toward helping another human being. When I told people in my town that this money, these gifts were coming from real people — real Americans — they were very touched. It totally changed their viewpoints on Americans."

Cuic graduated from Lebanon Valley with a degree in biochemistry, then received another bachelor's degree, this one in music, a year later. On campus, she was active in the International Student Organization, serving as president during her senior year. "I really enjoyed that," she recalls. "We did all kinds of activities for the community and for one another — helping the new kids get adjusted to a new country." Under her leadership, the annual international dinner was launched, opening up the entire Annville community to the cuisines and the cultures of students from scores of countries around the globe.

Cuic, now a chemist in the Bayer Corporation's research and development division in Elkhart, Indiana, is still deeply connected to her communities in Annville and Cojovina. "The media can portray leaders like Saddam Hussein or Slobodan Milosovic as bad guys and oversimplify the issues," she says. "But they have nothing to do with the other 10 million people who are just trying to live their lives. What does politics matter to a family who loses a child because they can't get antibiotics? That's what people have to remember."

VALLEY NEWS BRIEFS

Enrollment Climbs

Lebanon Valley College's enrollment numbers continued to climb as the 1999-2000 academic year opened with some 1342 full-time students. The new school year officially began on Saturday, Aug. 28 with an opening convocation in Miller Chapel.

Some 410 freshmen and 34 transfers have joined the student body.

society, Phi Theta Kappa.

The entering freshmen come from 11 states (Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Wisconsin) and four foreign countries (Kenya, Canada, Switzerland, and Kazakhstan).

The college also welcomed some 687 part-time students, with some 207 in the Master of Business Administration program and 24 in the Master of Science Education program. In addition, some 29 students have enrolled in the inaugural class of the college's five-year, master's degree program in physical therapy.

New Marquette Hall

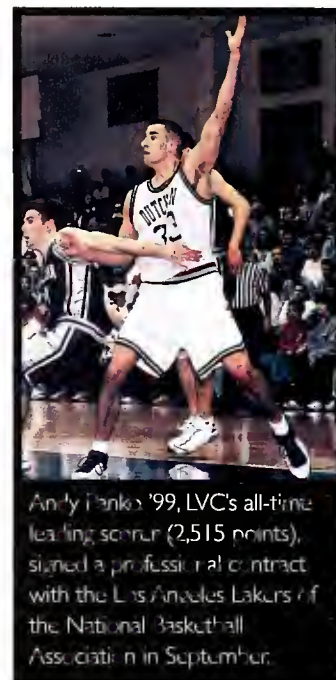

Fifty-six students moved into the new Marquette Hall as scheduled when school opened on August 28. The 16,500-square-foot residence hall is named in honor of Dr. George A. (Rinso) Marquette '48, who retired as the college's dean of students in 1990. The three-storied contemporary structure features 14 suites, each consisting of two single rooms, one double room, a study, and a bathroom. The first and second floor also contain a kitchen area and a lounge/lobby. A conference room is on the main level, and the partial basement houses laundry facilities and storage areas.

Welcome Gifts

Lebanon Valley recently received the following major gifts:

- The Kresge Foundation has awarded the college a $650,000 grant to support construction of the Heilman Center and to build the endowment. The grant is awarded on a challenge basis under the condition that LVC raise $1,947,836 in new gifts and grants by June 1, 2000.
- The Josiah W. And Bessie H. Kline Foundation has awarded a $250,000 grant to support the construction of and equipment for a classroom/laboratory suite in the Heilman Center.
- Olivette Haas Husted '28, who passed away in June, 1999, left a bequest of nearly $400,000. The funds will be distributed in accordance with the provisions of her will.
- The college has received a $100,000 gift from Dr. H.

Andy Tanks '99, LVC's all-time leading scorer (2,515 points), signed a professional contract with the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association in September.

Anthony Neidig '43, prominent chemistry alum and former chair of the LVC chemistry department, to establish the Neidig Chemistry Research Fund. The Fund will provide financial support for the research efforts of chemistry faculty and students.

An Armful of Awards

The College Relations Office received the following awards from the Central Pennsylvania Chapter of Women in Communications (WIC):

- First Place: summer music poster, chemistry poster, admission viewbook, and annual fund case statement (produced by Kelly Alsedek, director of publications) and two awards for The Valley magazine (Judy Pehrson, executive director of college relations)
- Second Place: Sharp Metal Objects brochure (Kelly Alsedek) and the Courier (Mary Beth Hower, director of media relations)
- Third Place: master of science brochure (Kelly Alsedek)

"The college is continuing its upward trend with another record overall enrollment," stated William Brown, dean of admission and financial aid. "LVC's strategic plan is to enroll 1600 full-time students by 2005, and we're moving appropriately along those lines."

According to Brown, 159 of the new freshmen were in the top 10 percent of their high school class and received a Vickroy Scholarship. Another 117 students were in the next decile of their high school class and received Leadership Scholarships, while 52 students were in the third decile and earned Achievement Scholarships. In addition, 10 individuals were awarded Academic Recognition, which provides half-tuition scholarships to transfer students from area community colleges who were members of the honor

Governor's Institute on Campus

In August, Lebanon Valley provided the venue for the Governor's Institute for Educator Partnerships on Reading. Some 100 teachers and intermediate unit directors attended. President David Pollick welcomed the group at their keynote session, and Dean Stephen MacDonald and Advancement Vice President Deborah Read attended a luncheon which included school superintendents from around the region, Pennsylvania Education Department officials, and deans and presidents from area colleges. Dr. Cheryl George, assistant professor of education, served on the conference's steering committee.

Taking a Stand Against Sweatshops

Lebanon Valley College is among 100 colleges and universities across the nation to join the Fair Labor Association (FLA), an organization of apparel companies, human rights organizations and consumer advocates fighting sweatshop labor in the garment industry.

The FLA, a non-profit organization, will oversee monitoring of company compliance with a workplace code of conduct created by the Apparel Industry Partnership (AIP). The AIP was formed in 1996 as a result of a challenge by President Clinton to the garment industry to offer consumers a method of discerning the conditions under which their garments are made.

LVC was the 17th school to join the FLA's fight. Other Pennsylvania institutions on the list are Gettysburg College, Millersville University, Neumann College, Penn State University, the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Pittsburgh, Temple University, and Villanova University.

Gender Geometrics

The college's Fall Perspectives Series focuses on gender issues and the ways in which gender shapes people's lives and determines their prospects.

The semester-long "Gender Geometrics" series was kicked off with a thought-provoking lecture, "Sex on the Brain," by Pulitzer prize-winning journalist Deborah Blum. "Gender Geometrics" will also include a film series featuring the classics "Some Like It Hot" and "Adam's Rib"; a video series which will examine the media's image of masculinity, gender and politics, advertising's use of women, and gender equity; lectures on a wide array of topics from Martha Stewart's new domesticity to the plight of women in Afghanistan; a panel discussion on equal opportunities for women; and an art exhibition of memory boxes which explores manhood, womanhood and other themes of sexual identity.

FRUITS OF THE CAMPUS:

A REPORT FROM THE VALLEY ARBORETUM

Harvest season is on our minds in the LVC Arboretum. Our trees and shrubs are filled with fruits and nuts.

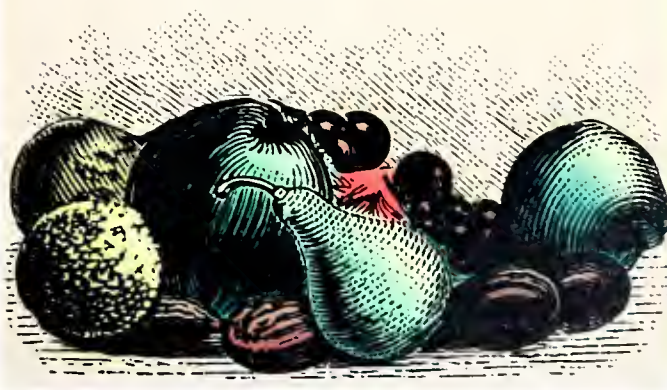

At Sheridan Avenue and Rt. 934, in what used to be the back yards of West Hall and Knights house, LVC still has a large pear tree that produces tasty fruit. Next to it is, surprisingly enough, a pecan. Pecans are generally thought of as more southern trees, but their native range gets into Ohio. The tastiness of the nuts is not documented except for the shells left behind by efficient squirrels. The tree is now too tall for harvesting by ground-based humans. Were they good when you were on campus?

A couple of fruits whose main value is looking nice are the "oranges". Growing in the protected southwest corner of Carnegie is the Hardy Orange (Poncirus trifoliata). These fuzzy yellow golf-ball size fruits are actually close to being oranges or lemons, which they resemble. The plants will hybridize and graft the true citrus species to allow more northerly orange growing. We know the history of this particular hardy orange tree on the LVC campus. It was donated in 1934 by the family of Hilda Buckley from Allentown and was planted personally by Earl Hoover and George Derickson.

The other oranges aren't oranges except in name. They are in the Mulberry family. These are the Osage-oranges that grow along the railroad right-of-way. When you come for field hockey or football games, look for grapefruit-sized rough green balls under the trees. Only a few animals eat the fruit, but their spicy scent makes them a nice accent in the fall fruit basket display. They can be cored and used as candle holders to accompany an autumn centerpiece. Native Americans used the strong, flexible wood for hunting bows.

Along White Oak Street, the oaks and hickory have produced their acorns and nuts, and the horse chestnuts near Carnegie and Blair have showered the ground with spiny balls that split to reveal the glossy, chestnut-colored nuts. Class-enhancing ginkgo seeds have begun their perfumy splats onto the lawn, to be competed for in winter by squirrels and students in the Plant Diversity class. Red holly berries and orange pyracantha fruits deck the shrubs and will persist to lend their color to our landscape through the winter.

Changes in Advancement

Deborah Read, vice president for advancement, has accepted a position as vice president for university relations and development at Northern Kentucky University. Read will be at LVC until the end of the year.

Tom Hanrahan has become director of college relations, replacing Judy Pehrson, who accepted a position as director of external relations for the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES) in Washington, D.C. CIES oversees the Fulbright Program and other international exchange programs.

Hanrahan, formerly sports information director at LVC, has been at the college for two years. He previously served as director of public and media relations for the Harrisburg Heat professional soccer team. He earned a bachelor's degree in political science and a master's in sports management from East Stroudsburg University, and is working toward a D.Ed. in higher education administration from the Pennsylvania State University.

Coming Home

Dr. Barbara Denison '79 is returning to the college as associate dean for graduate and continuing education.

Denison brings a wealth of experience to the position. She worked at LVC for 11 years from 1986-1997. From 1992-97, she was director of the college's Lancaster Center for continuing education. For the past two years, she has served as director of continuing education and distance education at Penn State Harrisburg-Capital Campus.

Denison holds a master's degree in sociology from the University of York (United Kingdom) and a Ph.D. in sociology from Northwestern University.

New Faces

Dr. Scott Walck has been named assistant professor of physics. He recently completed two years of postdoctoral research at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D.C. and two years at the Institute of Optics at the University of Rochester. He holds a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York, and a master's degree and doctorate in physics from Lehigh University.

Kathleen Kolbet has been named assistant professor of chemistry. Her speciality is in liquid state theory of macromolecular systems. She holds bachelor's degrees in math and chemistry from Gonzaga University and will earn a doctorate in chemistry from the University of Illinois in October. Rosa Tezanos-Pinto has joined the department of foreign languages as a Spanish instructor. She recently served as the director of the John Adams Publishing Company in Miami, as a lecturer in Spanish at the University of Miami, and as a symposia and grant writing coordinator for the Michel de Certeau Center for Critical Studies in Coral Gables, Florida. She holds a bachelor's degree in Latin American studies/sociology, a master's degree in Spanish from the University of Miami, and is a Ph.D. candidate for May 2000.

Dr. Henry Lee Wilson has joined the college as director of the writing center and assistant professor of English. He has served as a professor at Bradley University, a graduate teaching associate at the University of Tennessee, and as an instructor at Western Carolina University. He holds a bachelor's degree, master's degree and doctorate in English from the University of Tennessee. Dr. Christopher Brazfield has been named assistant professor of mathematics. Since 1993, he has served as a graduate teaching fellow in the mathematics department at the University of Oregon. He holds a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Reed College, and a master's degree and doctorate in mathematics from the University of Oregon. Dr. Louis Laguna will serve as assistant professor of psychology until a replacement is hired for Dr. Steven Specht, who resigned from the college after 10 years of service to accept a faculty position at Utica College of Syracuse University.

DR. SCOTT WALCK

CHRISTOPHER BRAZFIELD

Laguna previously served as an adjunct at LVC. He holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Penn State University, master's degrees in psychology from Millersville University and in clinical psychology from the University of Nebraska, and a doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Nebraska.

Dr. Kenneth Klinkner has been named to a one-year appointment as visiting assistant professor of political science. An expert in East Asian politics and political theory, Klinkner has taught at the University of Northern Iowa, the University of Illinois, the University of Maryland and at Riyadh College of Technology.

Dreyfus Research Fellow in Chemistry

Dr. Walter Patton, the college's first Dreyfus Fellow, has joined the chemistry department for a two-year appointment. Patton comes to the college from the National Institute of Health in Maryland, where he was a staff fellow since 1993. His areas of scientific expertise focus on basic cell physiology, specifically dealing with Ca^{2+} translocation (ATF5) and the possible links between these proteins and the disease of cholera. During his years at LVC, he'll teach a biochemistry lecture, and bio and an organic chemistry lab. He'll continue his own research on proteins, with assistance from students.

Patton holds a bachelor's degree in biochemistry from Susquehanna University and a doctorate in chemistry from Lehigh University. The Dreyfus Fellow is underwritten by a $65,000 grant from the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation. The fellowship is intended for young Ph.D.s who are interested in teaching careers in undergraduate institutions.

TAMI BARTON

KRISTY FLOYD

He holds bachelor's degrees in history from the University of Iowa and in Chinese/Japanese from San Francisco State University, master's degrees in English from San Francisco State and in political science from the University of Illinois, and a doctorate in political science from the University of Illinois. In addition, he completed a stint in the U.S. Army in the early 1970s as a Korean linguist. Klinkner is replacing Dr. Eugene Brown, professor of political science, who is spending fall semester in Hanoi, Vietnam, training mid-career Vietnamese diplomats in a program jointly administered by George Washington University and Vietnam's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Tami Barton has joined the college as assistant professor of business administration. She was formerly employed by Modern Woman as tax manager and financial reporter. She holds a bachelor's degree in accounting from Shepherd College and a master's degree in business administration from St. Joseph's University.

Joel Kline has joined the business department as a lecturer, after teaching as an adjunct at LVC for several semesters. Kline also holds an elected office in the County of Lebanon and is a principal in Concept Communications, Inc., a marketing and communications company in Lebanon. He holds two bachelor's degrees from Lebanon Valley and is pursuing a master's degree from Temple University.

Kristy Floyd has joined the college as webmaster. She holds a bachelor's degree in design from Drexel University and has considerable web experience, including three years with CDNow, a major on-line music marketing company. Alexandra Ritter has been named gallery intern assistant to the director of the Suzanne H. Arnold Art Gallery. Ritter is a graduate of Penn State University at College Park with a bachelor's degree in art history. She will be assisting in a wide array of gallery activities, ranging from lighting and installation of art works to research and proofreading. Mattia Guinivan, a former researcher for Elizabethtown College, has joined the Advancement Office as director of prospect research. She holds a bachelor's degree from Millersville University and a diploma in accounting from Elizabethtown. She replaces Ingeborg Snoke, who retired from the college after serving as campaign research assistant in advancement since 1987.

Mark Wolfe has joined computer services as user support assistant. He is a graduate of the Thompson Institute, where he was enrolled in the computer specialist program. Lavinia Garcia '97 has joined the college as an admission counselor. She was formerly an admission counselor at the University of Scranton. Garcia holds a bachelor's degree in psychology from Lebanon Valley and will receive a master's degree in human resources from the University of Scranton in December.

Deborah Lutz has been named gifts processing assistant secretary for Advancement. For nearly 20 years, she was employed by Cleaver-Brooks in Lebanon with duties ranging from data processing and payroll to human relations administrator. Prior to joining the college she served as a learning support aide and substitute secretary for the Cornwall-Lebanon School District.

A Winning Project

Dr. Carl Wigal, chair and associate professor of chemistry, conducted award-winning research with Milton Hershey High School student Feven Teklu. The project, "St. John's Wort, Enhancing Hypericin," won Teklu first place honors at the 1999 Pennsylvania Junior Academy of Science State Finals held at the Pennsylvania State University over the summer. The research included a chemical analysis showing the impact of light on plant production of the antidepressant hypericin.

Teklu is now taking classes at Lebanon Valley during her senior year in high school.

Writers

The second edition of Dr. Eugene Brown's foreign policy textbook, United States Foreign Policy: Politics Beyond the Water's Edge, was published in August by St. Martin's Press. The volume was co-authored with Donald M. Snow.

Outstanding Colloquium

Kim Saunders, director of multicultural affairs and chair of the spring 1999 Race Realities colloquium, received notification that the semester-long colloquium has been selected for a 1999 Peace Award. The award and a small monetary gift will be presented on behalf of the region's Presbyterian churches during a ceremony on Nov. 23.

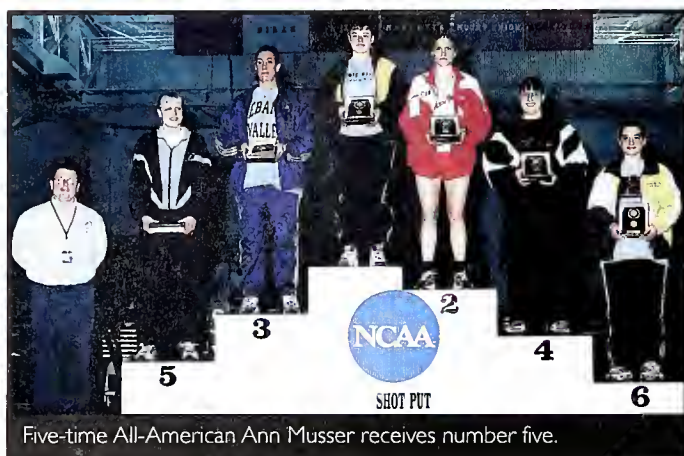

Promoted

- Ben Oreskovich, who joined the college in 1994 as assistant controller, has been promoted to associate controller
- RoseAnn Steckbeck, who has served as the coordinator of Conference Services for four years, has been named director of the department
- Mark Pulisic, who has been part-time as head soccer coach since 1995, has been hired to a full-time position as soccer coordinator and head women's soccer coach.
- Andrea Bromberg, who had acted as executive director of continuing education and graduate studies for 10 months, will return to her full-time position as executive assistant to President David Pollick.

Elected

Dr. Salvatore Cullari, professor of psychology, has been selected for the Editorial Board of Perspectives: Abnormal Psychology, which is published by Coursewise, Inc.

VALLEY SPORTS

Five-time All-American Ann Musser receives number five.

By Tom Hanrahan
Director of College Relations

Men's Basketball (24-4)

After playing in the 1999 MAC Championship game and appearing in the NCAA Division III National Tournament for the fifth time in seven seasons, expectations are high for this year's squad. With the loss of two four-year starters (Andy Panko & Dan Strobeck), seniors Dan Pfeil, Keith Phoebus, Jason Vogtman and Jason Potten will be expected to take up the reins. All four were named team co-captains.

Panko recently signed a professional contract with the National Basketball Association's Los Angeles Lakers and should be in training camp as you read this. Pfeil, a MAC First Team All-Star and a Third Team All-American last year, should receive significant scoring help from junior Steve Horst.

Head coach Brad McAlester is on track to break Dr. George "Rinso" Marquette's LVC record of 100 total career basketball wins. McAlester has 96 wins entering the season.

Women's Basketball (14-10)

In 1998-99, head coach Peg Kauffman guided her troops to the program's first-ever appearance in the MAC postseason. There, they faced eventual NCAA "Sweet Sixteen" participant Scranton. This year the veteran squad will know what to expect. The team lost just one senior, Melissa Brecht, and return four of five starters. Three-sport stars Serenity Roos, Lora Zimmerman, Tara Ruhl and Lindsey Yeiser all return as do junior guard Miriam Anthony and senior forward Meghan Ritzman.

Stacy Reinhart is back to form after missing most of last season with an injury. Several other underclassmen continued to improve over the summer and will fight for time. Sophomores Rose Grasa, Sorymal Rivera and Jen Smolenski could be among the lead group to see increased playing time.

Wrestling (2-12)

Second-year head coach Dan Daley lost two important seniors but returns one of the strongest lineups in recent history: NCAA Championship finalist Ted Kemmerling (2nd in the nation in 1999) and team captain Angelo Vicari graduated but four significant starters return. Seniors Nathan "Biff" Wade, William Stretkowitz and Pete LoBianco are back, as is sophomore sensation Jason Suda.

Wade did well in the LVC Petrofes Invitational last fall and is listed at 165 pounds on the preseason roster. Wade won 10 matches last season. Stretkowitz transferred back to LVC in January and reeled off 10 straight wins on the way to an 11-2 overall record. LoBianco, a four-year starter and three-sport athlete, won five matches with one pin at 141 pounds. Suda was second on the team with 14 wins. He later joined the track team and proceeded to win a bronze medal, in the pole vault, in his first MAC Championship. Sophomore Brian Eidenshink, three wins, returns as well.

Including freshman football players Jack Himmelfberger, Tom Kuhn, Sean McStravick, Anthony Pasquarella and Barry Rhodes, there are 15 wrestlers on the roster. Brandon Bishard, brother of baseball player Jessen Bishard, is also listed.

Track & Field – Men & Women

Both teams return a strong nucleus that features several school record holders. On the women's side, head coach Kent Reed has many returnees from last winter's squad that finished second at the MAC Indoor Championships held at LVC.

Included in that group are gold medal winners Ann Musser, Jana Romlein, Eileen Golias, Tara Ruhl and Danielle Stoveken. Musser, a five-time All-American (indoor and outdoor), was also named the Most Outstanding Athlete of the MAC Championships for the second consecutive year.

On the men's side, MAC medalists Braden Snyder, Jeremy Snyder (no relation) and Tim Stringfellow return. Braden Snyder earned a pair of silver medals while Jeremy Snyder and Stringfellow garnered a silver and a bronze medal each. The men's team finished fourth overall.

Swimming – Men & Women (1-9-1; 2-10)

On the men's side, third-year head coach Mary Gardner returns all but one this season. Freestyle specialist Damon Davis graduated in the spring. It is still a young team with only two upperclassmen on the roster. David Keiser and Brad Barger will pick up where Davis left off.

On the women's side, the potential is great with 24 of 25 swimmers back from a team that had its best season in years. The team had three individuals qualify for the MAC Championships in eight separate events – all three are back. Shannon Feather qualified for and competed in three events, as did Kris Haines. Megan Foxall represented LVC in two individual events.

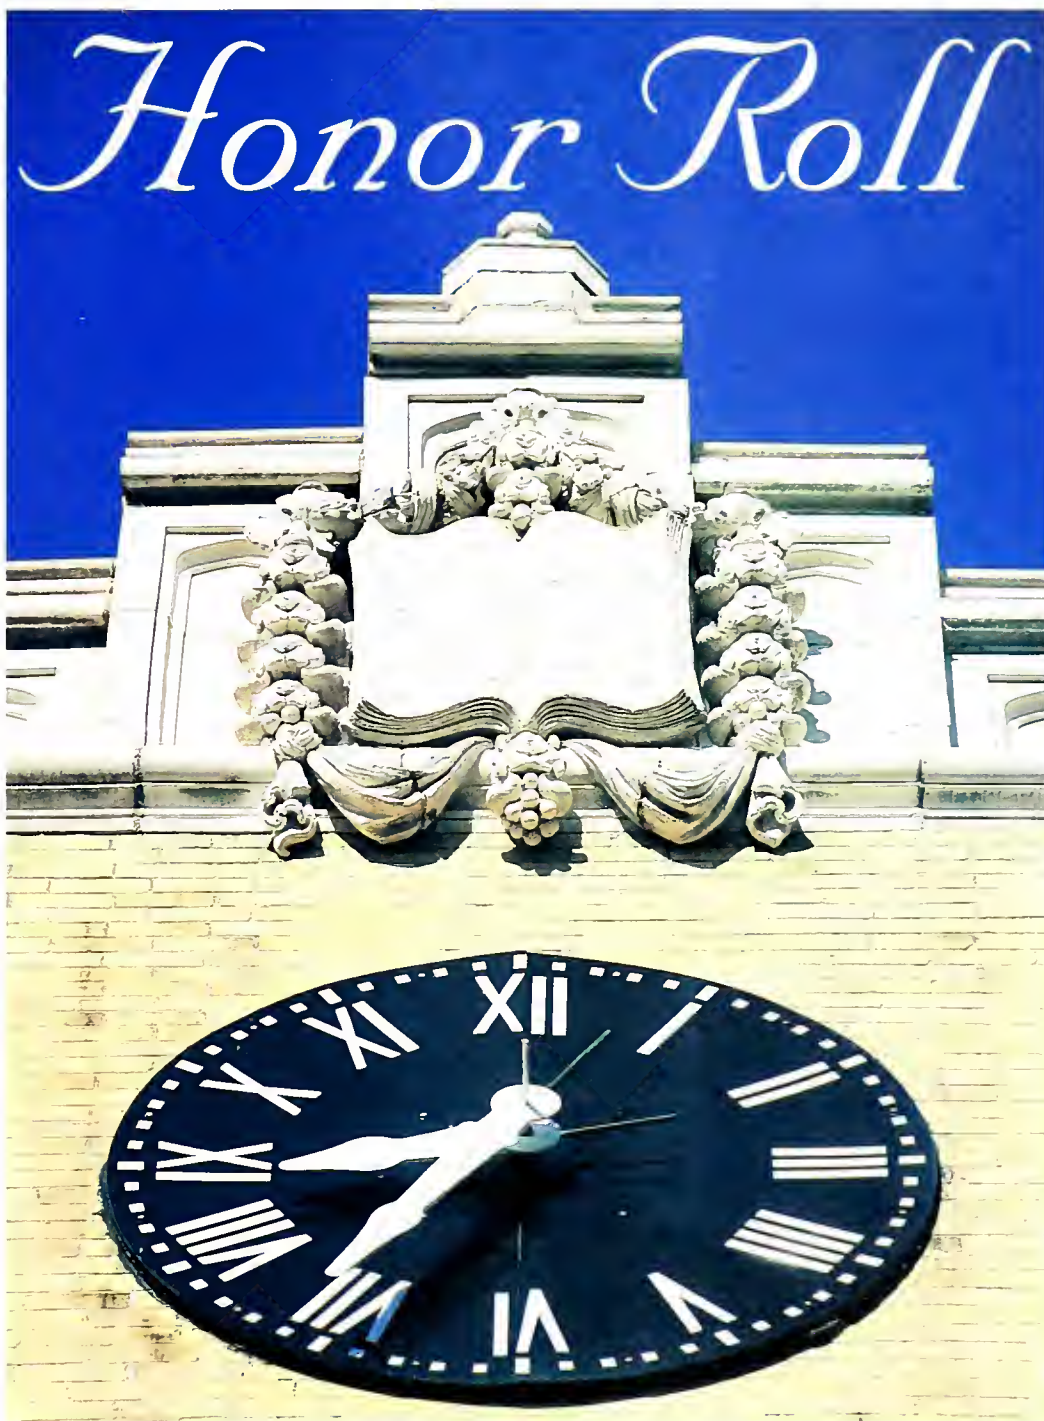

Ice Hockey (16-8-1)

LVC had a very successful first season of intercollegiate ice hockey posting a 16-8-1 overall record and an 8-8-1 record in the ECAC Northeast League. Head coach Al MacCormack returns 20 letter-winners including the Flying Dutchmen's top seven scorers and top two goalkeepers. MacCormack, and assistant Derek Lalonde, expect 11 freshman to vie for roster spots as well.

Forwards J. P. Callahan, Greg Kutchma and Jamie Taylor, all 40-point scorers in 1998-99, return for another campaign. Kutchma (24g) led the Dutchmen in goals scored while Callahan and Taylor were tied for the team lead with 23 assists each.

Vincent Stendardo, Dan Fox and Shaun McGinty, all returning forwards, scored 24, 23 and 22 points respectively last season. Kutchma, McGinty and defenseman Scott Rostholder were all tied for third on the team with 16 assists.

Kevin Block and Lincoln Matlock both return to man the goal. The duo appeared in 23 of the Valley's 25 games last season. Block led the team in games played (13), minutes played (691), shots faced (317), saves (285) and wins (9). Matlock led the squad in shutouts (1.5), goals against average (2.10) and save percentage (.903).

EACH YEAR, LEBANON VALLEY COLLEGE has produced an Annual Report summarizing the year's academic and financial highlights including the names of all donors to the college during that time. This year, we've instituted a change. An abbreviated list of donors is presented in this issue of the Valley, and a President's Report will be published at a later date which will include other donor categories as well as highlights of the past academic year. In the meantime, it is with heartfelt thanks that we list the names of the alumni, parents and friends who demonstrate their dedication to Lebanon Valley College by making contributions in support of college initiatives.

THERE IS A DUPLICATED DONOR COUNT FOR PEOPLE WITH SPOUSES IN DIFFERENT CLASS YEARS.

Every effort has been made to insure the accuracy of the donor lists. If you have corrections, please contact Carolyn Lauver, director of development, at 717-867-6227.

It's a challenge...

With your help LVC can meet it!

Lebanon Valley College has received a $650,000 challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation to complete the Heilman Physical Therapy Center and Endowment Campaign. Our goal is $6.5 million . . . we still have $690,324 to be raised by May 30, 2000 to meet the Kresge Challenge. • Meeting this challenge builds state-of-the-art classrooms and laboratory space for physical therapy students who will serve central Pennsylvania and regions beyond, creates an expanded fitness facility for campus and community and enhances our endowment to ensure a financially secure future for the College. • Won't you join this challenge and help put us over the top? Every gift counts, but remember, we must receive your gift or pledge by May 30, 2000 to count toward the Kresge goal. Please complete the attached form and send it with your gift or pledge in the return envelope provided with this magazine.

The students of Lebanon Valley College thank you for your help.

In the Top 10 Once Again!

Lebanon Valley once again ranked among the top 10 regional liberal arts colleges in the north in U.S. News & World Report's 12th annual "America's Best Colleges" issue and guidebook.

- Lebanon Valley moved up to number six on the list from number eight last year.
- The college is also ranked number four on the list of "best values" colleges — a ranking that relates the cost of attending a college or university to its quality.
- U.S. News bases its rankings on academic reputation, graduation and retention rates, faculty resources, student selectivity, financial resources and alumni giving.
